RIVER AT LOWEST POINT IN 9 YEARS

Power from Prairie du Sac Now Carries Half Janesville Load.

The present height of Rock as well as the Wisconsin river is the lowest since 1911, according to W. J. Schmiedley, of the Janesville Electric Co.

This does not decrease the power of the electric companies, plants, however, as the flow of water can be regulated by them at their plants. If it did, however, it would not have any effect on the lighting of Janesville as half of the power consumed is now received over the high voltage line from Prairie du Sac. The rest of the power is generated at the Fulton, Indian Ford, Montevideo and Janesville plants of the local company.

Strain in Emergency. Power from outside has been required by the Janesville Electric company since the addition of several more plants which required more power than could be generated at the plants of the company now operating. Steam power which was heretofore used quite frequently will now only be used in case of an emergency which means the collapse of the plant at Prairie du Sac.

Local Power for Trolleys. The acquisition of power from the Electric plant by the Rockford and Interurban company in the city and the Janesville Traction company in the near future will mean that this power will be secured from the station here of the Wisconsin River Power company. This will give local people better street car service. A sub-station is being installed at the Eastern avenue car barns. A station is also being installed at Town Line to take the power of the station at South Janesville.

WEST VIRGINIA ALSO FOR HARDING

to examine the laboring vote in this state with relation to that very issue and see whether the miners will be guided by the views of their leaders or on their own peculiar prejudices. Many miners are negroes. And in the Clarkston district, where the mining class is largely foreign born, of those who are naturalized, more than a third are Italians. I talked with one of the Italian leaders who knows more about the Italian voters in this state than any of the politicians on either side. He himself had twice voted for the American candidate into a severe denunciation of the president for having kept Plume from Italy.

Italians for Harding.

"Every Italian will vote for Harding," he said, "even doing everything in my power to double the vote for Harding among the Italians."

There are many thousands of Italians among the miners. There are other nationalities of course. The Italian grievance is merely an illustration. The truth is the Italians are more conscious of nationality than class. The prejudice on the Plume question is something concrete. The promise or help to the workers as a class is abstract. So Gov. Cox, who is personally popular in West Virginia, as is proved by the success of his meetings throughout the state both early in the campaign and late in the campaign, cannot hope to get a decision on the merits of his own candidacy. The resentment against the acts of the Wilson administration is bound to be a vital factor in preventing such a group vote as that of labor from being cast solidly for Cox.

Straw Votes Show

One cannot dismiss West Virginia without recognizing the plausibility of the Democratic case. For example, the Rexal straw vote which has been so overwhelmingly for Harding in most states shows two presidential candidates running more or less evenly. The drug store votes represent the city vote, which is normally republican. If that is evenly divided, the democrats contend that the votes in the mining district where there have been few straw votes taken, will show a large vote for Cox. Even assuming defections on the ground of alien grievances, republicans will admit that such strength as Cox develops must come from the mining districts. Furthermore, the registration of white women is far in excess of negro women, a fact from which the democrats insist on drawing optimistic conclusions. Also it will be recalled that Hughes carried West Virginia four years ago by about 2,000, which indicated a powerful democratic vote in a state normally republican by many thousands.

Women Interested. The women are showing a marked interest in the issue of nations as an issue. Both sides will admit that while the state looked easy for Harding in August, something has happened to cause anxiety in the republican camp. The republicans who are disposed to recognize a change in the situation here since August blame it on the factional strife between Governor Samuel Montgomery, who is making the race as an independent or nonpartisan candidate, and the draw from him from the Cox and Harding camps. Although he himself favors Harding, there are plenty of Montgomery and Cox titles and banners in the political parades and demonstrations.

Feeling for Wilson. The democrats explain the change of sentiment as a reaction against Senator Harding's speech at Des Moines on the league of nations. Many of the democrats are confident that if the state were two weeks or three weeks off there would be absolutely no question about the result. They feel that the swing is in their direction. One interesting thing which puzzles the political sharps is the spontaneous demonstration for Woodrow Wilson which occurred in the mass meetings held by the democrats. One editor insisted that if Wilson had been able to come to West Virginia and make a few speeches he could have won the state would have been safely democratic. That, however, is purely hypothetical.

Harding to Win. Summarizing the West Virginia situation, one goes away with an instinctive feeling that Senator Harding will win the state by a proportionately less vote than he will carry neighboring states like Ohio and Indiana, and with a readiness to be surprised if Cox upsets all calculations and obtains the electoral vote by a bare majority. The state is doubtful with republican probabilities.

(Tomorrow's dispatch will be the first of a series of three analyzing the political situation throughout the whole country, based upon personal visits to almost every state in the union since the two conventions.)

TWO CONSTITUTION DEFENDERS TO TALK

Head of First "Hobo" Convention Speaks Here This Evening.

W. D. Cornell, Chicago, who sponsored the first "hobo" convention ever held in the United States, will speak at the Corn Exchange here at 8 o'clock this evening under the auspices of the Constitutional Defense League, a Wisconsin organization which recently removed its headquarters from Wausau to Sheboygan. V. J. Kautz, Oshkosh, will speak at the same place Friday evening.

Mr. Cornell was pastor of an independent church at Ford du Lac at the time he gathered nearly 100 tramps and hobos at a convention. Unlike the conventions of recent years sponsored by Kautz, the "Millionaire Hobo" the Ford du Lac meeting was for the purpose of studying the tramp problem rather than to organize them into some sort of "hobo union."

The result of the undertaking was that Mr. Cornell and those associated with him decided that "tramps is tramps," but the convention, and Mr. Cornell as its leading spirit, gained national publicity. The failure of the tramp convention to accomplish anything of particular benefit to the "fraternity" did not lessen Mr. Cornell's interest in social and economic problems, and he brings to the platform the results of 20 years of study of these problems, with the power to express his opinions and convictions in a manner that is equalled by few men in public life today.

Following an all-summer campaign for the United American Chicago organization which is working along much the same lines as the Constitutional Defense League, Mr. Cornell came to the league and here already addressed audiences in more than a score of Wisconsin cities.

HIGHER INTEREST RATES

With money commanding a higher interest rate we are able to give our customers the benefit and have advanced the rate on Farm Mortgage Bonds.

There is nothing safer than a farm mortgage based on a conservative valuation of the security. Our mortgages never exceed 40% of our appraisal of the land exclusive of improvements. There is no inflation of land values in the localities in which our loans are made, fire cannot destroy it and wind cannot blow it away. Our farm mortgages have been good for over a quarter century. They are better today than ever.

LA KOTA HALLOWE'EN PARTY LOOKS LIKE HOBO CONVENTION

Garbed in raiment that might better have been in a grizzled deluge at a hobo's convention, 50 couples frolicked at the Lakota club annual Halloween and hard times party in the clubrooms and Terrace choroan hall last night. The affair was equally as big a success as those of former years.

Dancing was enjoyed from 8 to 10 o'clock with Thompson's orchestra. The music, furnished by the club, during the evening, was in a corner of the hall with George Sherman, Frank Sutherland and Carl Heller acting as bar-tenders. Apples were scattered for and pumpkin pie and doughnuts were served at 11:30 o'clock.

Misses Marjorie Van Kirk, Ella Schatz, Reinette Smith and Yea Rowley were judged to be the four girls in the most dilapidated outfits, while among the men, Dr. Lester Clark easily carried off honors with his shirt and trousers which probably would be several sizes too large for him.

Misses Wilmet, Walter Dulin, Mark Gullen, Luther Mills, George Sumat, Ralph Kamps, Frank Kennedy and Nevada Mc Carthy were among the men who received honorable mention for tramp outfits.

The hall was well decorated with

Garbed in raiment that might better have been in a grizzled deluge at a hobo's convention, 50 couples frolicked at the Lakota club annual Halloween and hard times party in the clubrooms and Terrace choroan hall last night. The affair was equally as big a success as those of former years.

Dancing was enjoyed from 8 to 10 o'clock with Thompson's orchestra. The music, furnished by the club, during the evening, was in a corner of the hall with George Sherman, Frank Sutherland and Carl Heller acting as bar-tenders. Apples were scattered for and pumpkin pie and doughnuts were served at 11:30 o'clock.

Misses Marjorie Van Kirk, Ella Schatz, Reinette Smith and Yea Rowley were judged to be the four girls in the most dilapidated outfits, while among the men, Dr. Lester Clark easily carried off honors with his shirt and trousers which probably would be several sizes too large for him.

Misses Wilmet, Walter Dulin, Mark Gullen, Luther Mills, George Sumat, Ralph Kamps, Frank Kennedy and Nevada Mc Carthy were among the men who received honorable mention for tramp outfits.

ARMISTICE DAY CELEBRATIONS.

In almost every community of the state there is to be a celebration of Armistice Day. In the years to come we will have added this to our days of historical importance just as the Fourth of July has come to be a part of the national life. But there is something wrong about Armistice Day that does not inject itself into the other days of war memory. Along a line of over 400 miles troops massed as they had never been before, moving forward always—an irresistible force in conflict with an immovable body with the inevitable resulting cataclysm, suddenly ceased war activities. The reaction swayed a world.

Out of it came a new planet of people. Whether we shall learn a lesson or whether we shall hark back under atavistic law to the things we had discarded, remains even yet for determination. After the centuries of climbing up from a savage and barbarous world to heights of civilization, we face the problem of still going forward or returning to groups of force and half anarchy, or the reestablishment of autocratic domination by fear and force as well.

It is therefore well on the eleventh of November to renew our faith in our government and the established order of things as fixed by the patriotic men who laid the cornerstone. Armistice Day should be more than a noisy celebration of an epoch-making episode in world history. It should be a day of thought for the betterment of the nation and of pledges to so act that we shall not be carried away with the insanity of demagoguery that followed the war as surely as camp followers trailed after the old time army.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S CONDITION.

Fifteen republican "irreconcilables" who want the League of Nations just as it is written, heard President Wilson at the White House, Wednesday. The Gazette reported the event. But it was not what the president said that interested the delegation, according to the New York Times correspondent; it was the "pliable state of weakness" of the president. In a whipl chair, very feeble, he failed to recognize many in the assembly, though he had known most of them, and read his speech in a "thick voice" scarcely audible to the small number of men assembled. This is the first statement of the physical condition of the president made for many months. The Times correspondent says the "members of the delegation were shocked."

These facts seem to put a new phase on the utterances of the president. Under no circumstances than that he was ill and irresponsible, with querulousness and peevishness coming from long illness and confinement in the sick chamber, his condition quivering expression in his public utterances, may be excused. Personally and as to a man he will give great sympathy to Mr. Woodrow Wilson. But when that is allowed to warp the vision and endanger the nation or to embroil us in difficulties at home and abroad, it becomes a public concern dissociated from personal sympathy.

What the president said to the delegation Wednesday was not new. It had been said before. It was the utterance of a man who brooks no interference and takes no advice, nor does he learn from events that changes have come in the great world from which he has been cut off for more than a year by an obscuring curtain that has clouded vision.

BLAINE AND THOMPSON.

John Blaine makes no secret that he is hooked up with James Thompson. They are both being campaigned for by the same committee—not the state republican committee which has been more or less spineless, but a committee appointed for the purpose of electing these two men, Cummings and Hall, with them affiliated with the nonpartisan league. This being the case the last vestige of party appeal to vote for Blaine has been discounted. It solves every republican from voting for Blaine, for now by his own advertisement the only thing that is republican about him is that he is on the ticket under that name.

Mr. Thompson may be set down as an opponent of Warren G. Harding's, for he does not accept any of the republican platform. No man can consistently vote for Harding and for Thompson. On the state ticket we have only Senator Lenroot, William J. Morgan and Henry Johnson, who are standing on the republican platform. The others are running a campaign on another platform and appealing to prejudices and class. They are on the republican ticket in the uniform of the enemy wearing the badges of the republican party but speaking none of the republican language. They are not even progressive republicans. Mr. Garfield, himself a progressive, says they are not progressives, and he has been one of the great leaders with Mr. Roosevelt.

COX SCRAP'S WILSON.

In his speech at Huntington, West Virginia, Governor Cox made the startling statement that he would accept the League Covenant with such reservations as were made by a senate of the United States. There has been a great change in Gov. Cox since he started out so gaily that Sunday morning in July, from the White House with the blessing of the president and the document of succession to the Wilson throne in his pocket.

Then Mr. Cox would have only the League as it had been written, without a jot or tittle of change. He stuck to that for a season—on the Pacific Coast, in the Far East of New England, in Rhode Island—but in West Virginia he sees a

Chemical Aid for Business

By FREDERICK J. HASKIN

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 28.—There is a firm here which believes in chemistry as a power to revolutionize industry just as strongly as Fulton ever believed in his steamboat or Bell in the telephone. Chemistry is already acknowledged as an important factor in industry, but this firm says that the possibilities of applying science to business have scarcely been tapped. It points out that by the present methods of handling materials recklessly and burning up waste rich in possibilities, the country's resources are dwindling so rapidly that efficiency and scientific management will have to be carried soon to a much higher degree.

In a few years we may expect to find it a common thing for a factory to retain a chemist just as it now employs a lawyer. Many large plants already maintain chemical laboratories. One of Boston's biggest and most efficient department stores has such a laboratory. And here in Cambridge by the Charles River, there is the big yellow brick building of this company which conducts a thriving business as chemical adviser and consultant to all sorts of manufacturers, inventors, tradesmen, and professional men. There is no line of industry which cannot be benefited by applied chemistry, the firm maintains, and the variety of its activities strengthens this broad claim.

One client, a manufacturer, recently discovered that kind of machinery which he had long been purchasing was not being made any more. The matter was taken up with the industrial chemist and an old bottle of the polish supplied. Then the manufacturer went home and in a short time he received the formula he wanted and help in establishing the necessary apparatus to make his own polish.

Another plant was having trouble with its product—minute tapicra—becoming mildewed. The chemist made a survey of the machinery in use and found that the trouble was due to the floor being belled in tin. When the tin was replaced with wood and the process changed slightly there was no more mildew.

In still another instance the firm was requested to make a series of tests for a merchant to ascertain the wearing quality of several kinds of stockings. Artificial lights were used to hasten the discoloration ordinarily caused by sunlight. Special apparatus produced the effects of rubbing, soap, mud, and wear, and careful records were obtained, so that from the final report the dealer knew all the strong and weak points of the different brands of stockings he had been carrying.

This last job is interesting because it shows how chemistry is slowly entering the buying game and rendering innumerable services to the dapper traveling salesman. Of course it will be some time before the small town general store with its modest capital can afford to have its stock analyzed to find out whether the silk or leather it is buying is as good as the salesman said. But big stores are doing this. They say that it is to have a test show up a poor grade of silk before they test it to wait and have customers find flaws and possibly leave the store forever. On the other hand, if the material in a lot of dresses has been scientifically tested for wear, dyes, and quality, and has proved durable, the customer can safely be assured of satisfaction.

To cope with the varying problems put to it, the firm here has to employ chemists who are unusually versatile. The company has the reputation of being the greatest paper authority in the country. It has a small paper mill in one of its laboratories and chemists are almost always working here on some new paper product. There are also many demands for work on glass and fuels. But for the most part, each new contract calls for a new angle of investigation.

An unusual problem to which the chemist worked out an ingenious solution was, "Can weeds in a sugar cane plantation be controlled more efficiently than by constant hand-weeding?"

The concern which wanted this question answered was in Hawaii. The research chemist spent some time in experiments and deep thought and finally merged with a kind of soft but heavy brown paper which they have made from a waste material of the sugar mill called bagasse. This paper was impregnated with asphalt and was laid out in long strips in a field where cane had been planted. When the young cane sprouted, its sharp pointed shoots pierced the cellophane and shot up, but weeds could not get through and die. This simple arrangement, using the waste material, increased the yield of sugar cane 25 per cent, and decreases the cost of labor for weeding 50 per cent.

Reclamation of waste is one of the chemist's most important fields of service. In the instance of the sugar mill the bagasse became valuable because it was right at hand and could be cheaply converted into paper by the mill itself.

A more vital instance of good material neglected turned up in the South in connection with the long leaf yellow pine. This pine has been the mainstay of the naval store industry, but now lumber men began to worry over the turpentine and rosin prospects, for they figure that the supply of virgin yellow pine is due to last only about 10 or 12 years longer.

This proposition was put up to the industrial chemists. They found that in the South there are thousands of acres of pine stumps. Experiments with some of these discarded stumps showed that, if they are shredded and a solvent added, turpentine, rosin, and pine oil can be extracted. These stumps were proved to be richer in turpentine than the trees themselves, and the soil from which they were blasted is fertile enough to be good land for cotton growing.

These facts, discovered about three years ago, are being applied to a small extent now. Utilization of the stumps, however, is more expensive than the old method of tapping trees, so that it is not likely to become popular for a few years yet, or so long as the supply of trees lasts. These are random examples given here, but they serve to show how scientific research, and especially chemical research, is needed in the conduct of business. Such assistance is not yet generally within the reach of small industrial concerns, because it is an expensive proposition, to keep skilled chemists at work in laboratories equipped for all sorts of experiments.

This is not the only plant of the kind in the country, and as time goes on there will doubtless be a number of business enterprises which claim the distinction of having its founder and head one of the pioneers of industrial chemistry—a man who 35 years ago stated the astounding idea that chemistry could help business. At that time, he says, such remarks were regarded as humorous, and called for a queer, puzzled expression. "You'll never blow up my shop with your internal glass." But this far-seeing chemist kept on working, and now million-dollar plants are confided to his care to be experimented with as he sees fit.

light, like Saul of Tarsus, and is ready to take half a League rather than none at all. The poor "heart of the covenant" of the president's making would be accepted with an arrow through the heart. Carrying out his statements Cox would take the League with the Lodge reservations he has so abused, and clasp the hand of the "wicked, impudent and audacious senate oligarchy."

Cox has changed the "solemn referendum" melodrama of Wilson into a comedy piece in one reel. He is no longer able to save Wilson and is trying at this late day to save Cox from the fate of Alton B. Parker—the worst defeated candidate for the presidency in years.

Revelations of the booze ring give only additional evidence of the criminal character of the whiskey and beer business.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE MAN WHO DOES HIS DUTY WELL.
 The man who does his duty well need ask no odds of any kind.
 For he can face the whole wide world and pay his way and travel on.
 There may be richer men than he, and greater men who've come to fame,
 But richer men or greater men cannot excel an honest man.

The man who does his duty well and gives his best to every task
 Has given all in service here that life of any man will ask.
 The man of talent may exceed the humbler hand in point of skill,
 But should he grow too proud to toll, the genius is a failure still.

The final test of life is not the distant heights that man has reached.
 The captain's reputation is gained if once the ship he sails is heeled.
 And he who rises high to fame may come at last some day to see
 That humbler man by patient toil have lived far nobler lives than he.

There are degrees of skill and fame; not all men's leaving is profound.
 But honest is honest no matter whoso'er it's found.
 And he who does his duty well, is honest, faithful, clear and true.
 Is doing in life's real test all that the genius can do.

Who's Who Today

ROBERT SMILLIE.

The man who is leading the 1,000,000 coal miners of Great Britain, now on strike, has been a prominent British labor leader for thirty-five years. His life is president of the Federation of Great Britain. He has been president also of the Scottish Miners' Federation since 1914.

Smillie is well known to American labor leaders. He has served as delegate of British labor at conventions of the American Federation of Labor. He has been an advocate of industrial rather than craft unionism. He was one of the leaders in organizing England's "triple alliance" of workers. This alliance is composed of the miners, railroad men and transportation employees. A united strike of these three bodies would paralyze England in a few hours, officials agree.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

Put an End to Autocracy Here.

Chicago Daily News (Ind.).—The democratic party, responding with notable docility to the coercive guidance of President Wilson, demands in its national platform the acceptance of the covenant without material change. So does Mr. Cox, its nominee. Its most authoritative spokesman, President Wilson, charges critics of the covenant with "gross ignorance and impudent audacity." It is a shameful charge. It is leveled at very many sincere Americans. It smacks of intolerance. It is refuted by the reasoning of able minds here and abroad. It is an unpleasant backwash of the free flowing tide of self-sufficiency that carried the president, surrounded by his personally selected satellites, to the Paris peace conference, there to exchange the specific pledges of his fourteen points for a league of nations so devised as to require the American people to guarantee the permanence of many glaring injustices enmeshed in a harsh peace. Bitter words, now spoken against his opponents by the executive who has failed to force his will upon the nation are mere uncouth debris from a crumbling dictatorship.

That dictatorship is, in the dominant issue of the present national campaign. It has been acclaimed by the democratic party and by Mr. Cox. Its shadow rests upon Mr. Cox's candidacy with the honorable quality of a substance and it also saturates the candidacy with fluid thoroughness. Indeed, the movement to make Mr. Cox president upon an issue dictated by Mr. Wilson has come to mean, if not an attempted prolongation of the Wilson regime, at least an effort to win an impressive popular vindication of its harmful policies and practices.

The Daily News advises voters of independent minds to work and vote for the election of Mr. Harding.

FORTY YEARS AGO

October 28, 1880.—Mrs. J. D. St. John has been asked to sing at the Court Street M. E. church and to lead the choir there for the presiding pastor. She will probably remain. Their present building on the corner of Main and Prospect is too small and the water power of the river is not sufficient to run the machines.

Personal Health Service

HOW LONG ARE YOU GOING TO STAY?

Native Americans, of native parentage probably have the greatest longevity of any people on earth. But the average duration of life in America is not increasing noticeably in the past generation; on the contrary, the expectation of life for Americans of American parentage has dropped in the past thirty years. According to a tabulation of census figures, made by C. H. Forsyth, the expectation of life for a man of forty years, native American of American parentage, was 32.8 years in 1900, and in 1910 it had dropped to 29.5 years. Foreign born, on the other hand, have a life expectancy in the same years, but their life expectancy was very low to begin with and remains still below that of American born Americans.

There must be something the matter with American life or our mode of living. Of course the native children of native parents are being added to year by year from various foreign racial stocks and that in itself would tend to lower the high average of the native born. But such comingling of bloods can scarcely account for the marked lowering in longevity mentioned above. Our country is ignorant of the rudiments of personal hygiene would seem the more probable explanation.

Only an inconsiderable minority of the native born give serious consideration to the study of personal hygiene or its practical application to their own lives. The children of native parents are acquiring such take some interest in the subject, but only in a casual way. For instance, they are content to acquire such means as they can from various unauthoritative and principally commercial sources. If Smith Jones and Company wish to market their own brand of soap, they feel impelled first to teach the American public that sprinkling the stuff around the cellar, the sink, and the bathroom will somehow prevent disease, and the grand old public accepts such buncombe as the scientific truth and conducts itself accordingly. Indefinitely more money is spent to misinform the public on all matters pertaining to health than is spent to teach the truth.

First the credulity of the American people is as great as ever it was in Barnum's heyday. Any half-baked fellow with a large gift of gull and the power of the pen can easily convince himself as some sort of new fangled specialist or authority on the treatment of human ills and a sufficient number of people will take the fellow's pretenses seriously and pay for his brand of plausibility without a thought as to his fitness or education. Of course there are laws in most places, regulating the practice of the healing art, but who ever heard of a modern unorthodox healer bothering his head about such an insignificant thing as the law?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
 Is it advisable to have a child's mouth X-rayed to determine the condition of the teeth? Is it true that X-raying is dangerous and that it has proved fatal to a number of patients? (J.)

ANSWER.—It is advisable to have X-ray pictures made if the child's physical condition is such that such pictures have never proved fatal or done any harm whatever. In the case of a child, the X-ray should be taken by a specialist or technician working constantly with the ray, and after serious injuries, but there is no risk to the patient in having momentary exposures for making X-ray pictures. Should a girl of fourteen wear corsets, or an corset? What is the average height and weight of girls of that age? (E. S.)

ANSWER.—A girl of fourteen should be 50 inches tall and weigh 100 pounds. Whether a girl should wear corsets depends on her aim and ambition in life. If she means to become a physician, she should never put on corsets; on the contrary, she will train her own good muscles to support her weight. But if she is to just follow along the same old rut she will probably begin wearing corsets at an early age. It seems to a question of how much she knows about the human body. The physical education has been conveniently ignored—schools a little behind the times.

Fresh Milk.
 Is milk good for children when just from the cow? Should it be cooled first? When is the best sign of the moon to wean a child? (Mrs. J. M.)

ANSWER.—Milk fresh and still warm is ideal for children or adults. It is good for them at any time. Excellent success in weaning is met with in all signs of the moon, though it is better to annoy the grannies by saying so.

Voice of the People

Editor G. Zette:

I have read with interest the items concerning the doings of the Janesville Chamber of Commerce and especially impressed with the statement (in issue of Oct. 16) of the intended "investigation of the advisability of establishing a community market."

I would be highly delighted to see printed the findings of such investigation. Establishment of a real community market is a venture which is in its nature, and there is danger ahead.

I know of a man, who, when mayor of a fine city twice the size of Janesville, established a community market to the great benefit of 85 per cent of the populace, but he incurred the wrath of the other 15 per cent. He is in the penitentiary now.

Unlike this lone mayor who had other duties to attend to, I consider the Janesville Chamber of Commerce a strong aggregation, which can guard the interests of the people, if it will, against the tact and cunning of monopoly.

By all means let us have the real community market.

The Letters of Tessie and Joe

DEAR TESSIE:

My new photographs were finished today. I dropped into the photographer's expecting the worst, and I wasn't disappointed. There's no use of me trying to have a flattering photograph taken. I guess I'm a plain, blunt man and there's no flattery about me.

Anyway, I didn't see any reason for having injury to my pocketbook added to insult to my facial expression, so with great delicacy I made the bird a proposition whereby he was to keep his photograph and I was to keep my money. It was an attractive proposition the way I explained it, but you never saw a photographist so taken in all your life. He went so far as to say that what I wanted was a beauty doctor and not a photographer. That will give you a fair idea of a photographer's sense of humor, though to give the devil his due when I stop to reflect I realize the fellow was serious in the matter.

So, now that I have the pictures, I might as well send you one to show that I have no false pride. I am enclosing the dimmest print. Don't show it to the baby, though. Don't show him any of my pictures any more, even when you feed him sugar at the same time to break the shock, as you say you have been doing. I think it will be best for him to sort of form an ideal of me in his mind and then on my next trip home when he actually gets a lamp at me he will be a little older and probably able to stand more.

Although I have poetry enough in my soul not to let this little incident discourage me in my search for beauty, still the next time I watch the birdie I'm going to make a deal with the photographer like people do with lawyers sometimes—a big fee if he wins the case and no hard feelings or anything else if he doesn't.

Kiss the baby for me. Maybe you better rub a little sandpaper on his face at the same time to make it seem more lifelike.

JOE.

Hallowe'en
Is Heralded
by Parties

Hallowe'en, which falls on Sunday this year, is heralded by the appearance of brooms, witches astride brooms, and the whole family which reigns mysteriously supreme during the month of October and into November until the Thanksgiving motifs make their appearance.

Local societies, clubs and various organizations are embracing the time as an appropriate time for social gatherings. The season of Hallowe'en has been a popular time for parties due to the many opportunities afforded for entertainment, decorations and even certain refreshments which are claimed only for this time of the year.

Charms and superstitions as to the future, for telling games and which love afford the hostesses ideas for entertaining. Cakes, pumpkins, cornucopias, and witches, with orange and black as dominating colors lend possibilities in decorating the home and table for parties. Cider, doughnuts, apples, and pumpkin pie claim first place on the menu of Hallowe'en functions and served in an informal fashion do away with the rigid formality of most parties. In fact at no other time of the year do social affairs take on such an air of informality and don't care, in for a good time attitude. Costume parties are favored at this season again dropping the mantle of ceremony and scrupulous observation of form.

DOCTORS AGAINST BIG LIQUOR DOSES

Condemn Practice of Some in Indiscriminate Prescribing of Whiskey.

Members of the Rock County Medical association at their meeting at the county asylum Tuesday evening passed a resolution condemning the practice of indiscriminate liquor prescriptions by the members of the medical profession. The resolution is as follows: "WHEREAS, the practice of indiscriminate prescribing of liquor by some members of the medical profession on the more request, therefore, and without regard to the need of the individual is bringing our profession into disrepute, and

"WHEREAS, the Rock County Medical Society as a body, desires to affirm its wish that all its members shall render strict obedience to the laws, whatsoever they may be, "THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the Rock County Medical Society as a body, condemns all and every effort on the part of the medical profession to take unfair advantage of the privileges to the physician under the law by the indiscriminate granting of prescriptions for the purchase of alcoholic stimulants."

The address of the evening was given by Dr. Charles M. on "Sleeping Sickness," pointing out that although the majority of victims recover their recuperation is very slow.

Pimento Cheese Sandwiches—

Cream, one-quarter pound cheese, add chopped pimentos or fresh peppers and salad dressing. This makes a delicious sandwich, is much more nourishing and very inexpensive.

Tomato, Pepper and Cucumber Salad—Peel and chop tomatoes and cucumbers. Arrange alternate slices of tomato and cucumber on crisp lettuce leaves, garnish with slices of hard boiled egg or green pepper. Sprinkle with French dressing. Serve with mayonnaise.

Ice Cream—Three-quarters cup coffee, six three-quarters cup light cream, six tablespoons minced maraschino cherries, one pint vanilla ice cream, vichy and seltzer. Into the glass measure two tablespoons of the syrup, two tablespoons of the cream and a half tablespoon of the cherries. Blend thoroughly, fill up the glass with vichy or seltzer, put in two tablespoons of the ice cream and serve at once. If desired, this may also have a topping of sweetened whipped cream, which may, in turn, be garnished by a few shredded maraschino cherries.
